

Employee Recognition: A Missed Connection among People and Bosses

In a survey of 1,500 employees and 1,500 senior decision makers, we've discovered

82% of managers report that they prioritise showing timely appreciation and thanks to employees who have done good work.

The desire for recognition is global:

And these employers spend over

a year on employee recognition

(Source: Bersin and Deloitte)

That's good news... right?

After all, increased employee recognition contributes to:

Reduced turnover

Increased productivity

A boost in company morale

Increased collaboration

Yet, 54% of employees feel their boss could do more to appreciate them

That is... every second employee

And more than one third (34%) of senior decision makers don't think that regular recognition and thanking employees at work has a big impact on staff retention

But they're wrong.

70%

of workers say that motivation and morale would improve if managers simply said thank you more.

50%

of employees surveyed would leave a company if they weren't regularly thanked and recognised for their efforts

85%

of workers think managers and leaders should spot good work and give praise and thanks
whenever it happens

Instead of saying "Goodbye" to your employees, it's time to say "Thank You."

Learn more at rg.co/recognitiondemo

Source:
Reward Gateway Employee Recognition Survey 2017